Credit

Credit is a friend that must be watched, nurtured and developed.

Used properly, it adds to the wealth of the farm. Abused, it rapidly consumes the farmer's working capital and brings him to bankruptcy. The farmer must do his part. He should not be easily tempted by outside enterprises. His own business should be his first consideration. A good business man does not seek outside investments when his own business is suffering from want of capital. The farmer cannot expect maximum co-operation from his banker when he is investing his surplus in get-rich-quick schemes.

It is well for the farmers to do as all other business men do; establish their bank credit and use it whenever waiting for legislation to give him all they need it. The farmer who is the credit he needs or give it to those who need it most will not be disappointed. Therefore he should always, when establishing his own credit, be sure that it is like the development of any asset. The beginning must be made, attention then to building up and keeping it. If one is willing to hire credit as he pays for the use of some other privilege, takes the banker into his confidence and deals squarely with him, he usually does not suffer the lack of all the working capital he needs. The banker has credit to sell, just as the merchant has shoes, suits and notions. One must be willing to pay a reasonable rate of interest and to see that he can give good paper in return.

It is well to remember that our most precious possession in any business is our credit. It is one of the hardest things to build up and one of the easiest to destroy. One can spend years building up a good credit and yet lose it in a single day. We can do almost anything with a good credit; without it we can do very little. Why not let your banker help you build it up, guard it and show you how to use it? When you take a bank into partnership, when you open an account with the bank, start right away to establish your credit. Any one who seeks to establish his credit must be willing to use it. It will not come to him without effort. Don't expect to establish your credit in a moment. It will take many transients to build up a splendid credit. It may be much patience. It is the careful attention given to the little details of honesty and square dealing, that in the sum total, earn for a man that most desirable recommendation, "His word is as good as his bond."

You may be a bit shy of banks and bankers; there is hardly anything in the fine columns, or the long line of metal wickets, or the sharp eyed tellers to make one feel at home. "What interest would they have in my ideas and ambitions?" one may say. But banks and bankers have changed in the past few years. The banker may (being the guardian of other people's money is a serious business) that he always has been, but I am sure, he is more approachable by the farmer

Notice Re Gopher Poisoning 1921

The Council of the Municipality are spending considerable money each year for poison for the destruction of money, they consider that it should be spent in such manner as to kill the most Gophers.

It is the duty of the council to get a supply of poison and have it used when the poisoners think they have time to put it out. This system is absolute waste of money, and as it your money the council ask that the Gophers will be poisoned as soon in the spring as they start to come out, and that another dose could be set out about two weeks after the first with good effect.

If any quarters are poisoned by a ratepayer and those adjoining are not poisoned in reasonable time, the owners whom should poison them, the council ask that the attention of the unpoisoned quarters be given to the necessity of the poisoning.

They are in these lands useful some liable to be entered upon, some land and charged to the owner as are company lands.

The poison for this year is now on hand and will be ready when the time comes to lay it out.

behalf of several friends was done in his usual inimitable manner. He indulged the services of Mr Croe to the district; and congratulated both Mr and Mrs Croe on this auspicious occasion. Both Mr and Mrs Croe suitably responded and after a step dance by C. Cowan as only "Gus" can do it, dancing was indulged in until 3.30 a.m. when all went home after having spent a splendid time. A very dainty lunch was served during the evening. Those who had the arrangements in hand are certainly to be congratulated on the success of their endeavours. The music supplied by Messrs Fred Scott, Geo. Lawson and J. Stewart was of the usual high order of Brady.

year, same to be recorded in the min- worth while, which more than repays the ladies and gentlemen who were instrumental in promoting it. It is quite true that we are living in a small town, but after all a Town or a Community is no smaller than the people make it, and there is absolutely no reason why the social functions should not be placed on as high a plane as possible, and such has been accomplished in this respect by the members of the Chauvin Curling Club, and there is no doubt that the Curlers Ball will be an annual event. The dance hall has more or less been the target for adverse criticism, many people claiming that it is an influence for evil, especially in the case of the younger people, but one thing is certain people will not refrain from dancing, therefore it is incumbent on the moral reformers to throw in their lot with the people who are exerting themselves to the limit to make the Chauvin Ball Room a place where the rising generation will be taught proper deportment.

Curlers' Ball

The Chauvin Curlers Ball last Monday evening proved the most pleasant social function. The hall was appropriately decorated for the evening with a color scheme of gold and blue. It being charmingly draped with muslins and floral emblems. Appropriate curling emblems were tastefully displayed, together with the name of the club over the doorway. Over eighty guests were present and enjoyed to the full the following program:

1 Waltz, 'Wyoming' 2 One Step 'Taxi' 3 Waltz 'Carrollin' Sunshine' 4 Two Step 'Van A's' 5 Waltz 'Down by the Meadow Brook' 6 One Step 'My Dearest Fantasy' 7 Fox Trot 'Feather Your Nest' 8 Waltz 'Golden Gate' 9 Quadrille 10 Waltz 'Let the Rest of the World' Interval for Supper 11 'Wyoming' 12 Fox Trot 'Preselins' 13 Two Step 'Pippin' 14 Quadrille 15 Waltz 'Tumble Down Shack' 16 Three Step 17 Two Step 'Still Alarm' 18 Waltz 'Sweet Heart Land' 19 One Step 'Come on Papa' 20 'If You Could Love' Extra Fox Trot 'So Long So Long'

The music was rendered by Messrs. James Freeman and Parsons and Miss Nachtergaele, together with the Chauvin Orchestra.

Letters To The Editor

The members of the Chauvin Curling Club held their first annual ball on the evening of the 7th, and despite war and rumours of war the function was an unqualified success, and all present felt that the effort was well of dress or manners. Again the organizers are individuals of high moral standing, and anything contrary to ordinary rules of decorum would not be permitted in dress or any other sphere. The aim of the writer in inserting these words is to contradict the erroneous notions that have been imputed to the organizers in organizing the Curlers' Ball.

The writer would ask those who have been instrumental in romancing these ideas to consider, and to weigh well, the second commandment "Love your neighbor as yourself".

During the last few days Mrs. Grunty has been busy on the subject of the gowns or dresses to be worn at this function, but the writer feels that the town of Chauvin is to be congratulated on having so many ladies in our town and district who can attend a function like this in the proper dress, and the graceful and delicate gowns worn at the ball by all the ladies present could not but be admired by the severest critic, and they lent considerable charm to the whole proceedings. Furthermore it is seldom that the gentlemen have turned up to a dance in Chauvin so immaculate, and members of the curling club feel deeply indebted to all who attend the Ball with their presence and did their best to co-operate with the promoters. A Ball cannot be a success without a really good orchestra, and the Chauvin Orchestra has earned the thanks of the community for the high class music furnished, also for stopping into the breach and sticking to their game.

The writer would wish to make a few remarks in regard to the Curlers' Ball. First of all it was organized simply from a social motive, irrespective of any religious, or any other antagonistic motive. It has been spread abroad that it was organized with the intent to offend the Catholic denomination. No such intent was ever meant. In fact the members of the executive tried to their utmost to have their ball on 17th March, and after finding out it would be impossible, and after consulting the Catholic element it was decided to have the ball under existing circumstances. No doubt dancing is not customary during Lent, but owing to existing circumstance and the fact that the 4th of March was the most suitable time to have it was thought fit when no offense or insult was meant to have it.

Some of the Protestant denomination who have been scandalized as well as the Catholics, would do well to think and consider a little before they jump to conclusions. Christianity in the true sense of the word is 'brotherly love' irrespective of creed or denomination. It does not consist in sowing seeds of dissension and imputing wrong motives to one's actions.

The people of Chauvin have a great respect for the pastor of the Catholic Church and they, especially the organizers of the Curling Club would be the last to do anything detrimental to him or his church, and if anything has reached his ears to the contrary, the writer feels the organization would extend to him their sincerest regret.

Another word in reference to the dress suggested for the ball. Erroneous rumors have spread abroad. It was the intention of the organizers to have the dance restricted to the most desirable way possible. It was thought it would add a certain dignity to the dance if there was a certain formality attending it. This formality did not mean any one would be excluded who had not the conventional evening dress dress. On the contrary, the aim of the organizers was to welcome every one, and see that he had a good time, irrespective of dress or manners. Again the organizers are individuals of high moral standing, and anything contrary to ordinary rules of decorum would not be permitted in dress or any other sphere. The aim of the writer in inserting these words is to contradict the erroneous notions that have been imputed to the organizers in organizing the Curlers' Ball.

The writer would ask those who have been instrumental in romancing these ideas to consider, and to weigh well, the second commandment "Love your neighbor as yourself".

SHORT STORIES OF A SOLDIER'S LIFE
AT THE FRONT

Going up the road, after I had seen to stand a season or two of careful that the fellows were in holes, safe from the direct fire of the machine guns of Mouquet Farm, I came to a trench that lead forward toward the front end and do course I started to go up it. I noticed, in an abstracted fashion, that the trench was gradually getting shallower and of course knowing that there was a machine gun waiting only a few yards away, to take a shot at the unwary, I was naturally cautious as to how I came to the end of this trench. It got so shallow that I had to go down on my hands and knees and after crawling in this way until the trench was about 6' deep, I stopped, and rose on my hands and toes to have a look round. I could see nothing exceptional and without further ado I rose to a kneeling position even from here I did not see what I had expected to see, and no one seemed to have seen me, so I started to get to my feet. I had got to that position commonly known as the "Knees bent" position when without the slightest warning the machine gun opened up and at the same time as I heard the gun I saw some of the bullets strike the ground about 15 feet to my left. Well to say I ducked is to put it lightly for I just pulled my feet from under myself and flopped. This had hardly been accomplished when Fritz got that gun trained right over me and I started to try and push China from the surface of the earth. I do not know why the bullets did not hit me but I sure thought some of them would.

Now here is a funny thing. That gun was nearly head on to me and if I had got hit it would have been in the head and all the time I thought that the bullets were going to hit me in the middle of the back and while they were going over me, just sounding like bees flying over. Had a sensation in the middle of my back that was akin to how one would feel if someone was tickling his back with a feather.

The gun stopped firing after what seemed to me most of a good sized day, really maybe half a minute, and after waiting for the minds of the enemy to go to something else I started to crawl back into the deeper part of the trench. As soon as I got into the deep part of the trench I wheeled about and went to where the other boys were stopping in the holes. "Geel I was beginning to think that I had got you," said Mac. I told them that it was not much good going to go through that trench and that we would wait until it got dark and I would lead them over to the left, as far from the gun as I could and then come back into line after we got reasonably around it.

Just at this time we noticed that there was a party of men coming out from the old line at a place where I knew some of our men were stationed on observation duty. I watched the party come out and wondered who they were. They got into the sunken road at a point 150 yards down from us, and were going to go over the top of the road when their officer noticed us sitting at the side of the road, so he brought them towards us.

When he got within easy speaking distance of us he asked, "Where is the new front line from here?" He was an engineer officer and looked rather green to me. I told him that if he came straight in that direction he would run right into the arms of the brave and gallant defenders of the line, but, I said, putting in a joker, "You will be rather foolish if you go forward now for there is a machine gun concealed a few yards from here that will sure clean you up if you start to go over the top here."

I have no doubt but that this was the first action that this officer had ever been in and naturally he was as cocksure as they all are at that period. The opinion of a common or garden variety of soldier, meaning that private, had no weight with them at all.

This fellow said, "To Hell with the machine gun. I have got to get a strong point dug and I'm going to get it done and get back again." Oh! Well, I thought, if you feel that way about it, go to it.

He had ten or a dozen men with him and they started to go up the road, they went out onto the top via the small trench and had not disappeared from view more than half a minute before we heard the old machine gun open up. Oh! Yes, dear reader, there was some of them hit. None of them were killed, I think that there were three hit and the Lord only knows how the rest got through unless the gun could be only traversed so far, and could not reach them when they got farther away. Well the officer got away himself that was made me sure and there were a couple of fellows who were not hit, that stayed behind to help the wounded out.

After a while we were started to hear, coming from the front, a series of strange oaths, they were beautiful and terrible enough to make one tremble. I stepped out into the roadway and MacCauley did the same and lo and behold there before our eyes was one of our old pals, who had been sent back to the company, and he was bringing in a dozen or so prisoners

There were some of them wounded and they were not going fast enough for Pete that was the reason for all the fiery language, and let me tell you Pete was doing more than swear for if the Hunns looked round they too much he would give them a slight reminder that he held a rifle by just touching their pants with the bayonet point.

Geel! He looked a terrible sight. He had not had a wash for more than a month and that more or less of a beard spreading over his face. His face was drawn and cruel like that of a man who has seen and given death and neither given or taken quarter. There is not the slightest doubt, but that, he would have killed the whole bunch of prisoners if they had given him the slightest opportunity and reason for so doing.

After we had discussed the doings of the battalion and asked Pete what the new line was like he told the Hunns, who were sitting down on the side of the road, with many choice oaths to get a move on. I don't know how the Hunns felt, but I saw them that understood English or not but one thing is sure, if they did not understand the language it is certain that they understood by the oaths and gestures what was wanted of them, for they started to go down the road with Pete at their heels helping them along like a true victor and hero in something of the same manner in which their own men had done at times to our men.

When they had got down the road for about 175 yards I noticed them stop and, on watching, I saw that they were going down and leaving one of the wounded Germans behind. I yelled to Pete to take him in, but I do not think that he heard me for he didn't even look round to see who was yelling.

After seeing the party of prisoners disappear into the trench I looked again at the man they had left behind. He was stirring slightly and so I decided to go and see what I could do for him. Turning to MacCauley I said "Come on Mac and let's see what we can do for that poor devil." He came without a word, and we started down the road. "I wonder who that fellow is," I said, looking at where a fellow was kneeling down in front of a man who was laid out on the ground. He seemed to be in the act of dressing the man and as we walked towards him we wondered how he had got into the road without us having seen him. We were some distance from the point where we saw that the man was dead and that when he had been killed he had been in the act of dressing the man on the ground who was now also dead. The man who knelt down was holding a bottle of iodine in one hand and a bandage in the other. He had forgotten which hands these things were in and the iodine bottle had the cork out of it and the bandage was slightly unrolled, the loose end was blowing in the wind. There was not as far as we could see any mark on the man but he had no doubt been hit in some vital nerve centre with a bullet. We passed on and came to the man who had been left behind. He was laid out on his back and as I stood over him looking down at the place where he was wounded (in the stomach), he muttered, "Merci beaucoup." I don't know, maybe he did look rather fierce and gave him a scare but I soon put him at ease we decided to take him in to the trench, that was from there, 200 yards with a smile. After a short confab away, and up a slope. I don't know why the machine gun referred to above didn't sweep that area, unless it was as I have already said, unable to, on account of only being able to traverse for a certain distance.

We immediately started to try and get the poor man into the trench were going to carry him in but he could not stand that kind of treatment and so we had to support him with our shoulders.

For the first stretch he came along all right and would only stiffen out with a groan about every 40 yards, then he got it down to less and less distance until he was stopping and closed down, we started.

going rigid every few paces. To bring matters to a show down Old Fritz started dropping Whizz-Bangs near us. So close that it seemed as though he were deliberately trying to get us. Well when the first one landed it passed over our heads and dropped, with a throwing up dirt, 50 yards ahead of us. We needed no more warning and told the Henle that he was going to go into the trench without further delay and as he stiffened in the trench, we kept right on and dragged him along. We had got to the place where the first shell landed when we heard another one coming. It dropped about where we had been, when the first one came over, and the pieces passed us doing no harm to either of us. We saw the man to the trench side and handed him over to our fellows telling them to get him back to the dressing station right away, and without any more ado we started back to the roadway that we had come from.

We were about 150 yards from the trench, when the first few yards we heard another shell coming over. When it went past us, I turned round to see where it would drop. It seemed to me to drop right in the trench where our men were, and turning to MacCauley I said "Spud and party all shot to Hell." MacCauley looked about him, he collected the cables, and said that it sure looked that way.

Arriving at the sunken road I said to MacCauley that we might as well pick up some grub, on the way to the fellows, from the haversacks of the different dead men that were laid all around. MacCauley collected water bottles while I collected the canteens. It was a gruesome job, but one you soon get used to, and of course a man has to cut. While going through one man's haversack I came to a piece of soft rubber that had a tube at one end of it. On blowing into the tube, a slight puff of air came out. "Too big for me," I said, and I transferred it to my pocket, thinking that it would come in handy.

When we arrived back to the place where Hutson and the party were in the holes we had the cigarettes and the tobacco. We had run into cigarettes and tobacco and after the supper was finished we enjoyed a smoke. Isn't it rather funny or maybe you call it something else, there we were among about 50 dead men and we were eating and smoking and enjoying ourselves. That sure was the life of a soldier and he gets used to seeing death in so many forms that it is hard for him to think about it in the light that it is usually thought of. I have heard fellows say, and have said it myself, on seeing some dead men with his body all smashed to a pulp or with his head all knocked off, "Too bad, poor fellow. Well anyway he never knew what hit him." And this is the usual run of sympathy that a dead man gets. Do not run away with the notion that a soldier is not religious, for if you do you will carry away a great impression. I have found, and I think my statement will be backed by any Padre who has served with a battalion in the line for any length of time, that there is a whole lot of true religion in the soldier. A man cannot be in the different battle-fields for long before he feels that there is a Supreme Power ruling over all. The whole world, more or less believe, in a Supreme Power, and this Power is called by various names, but ask any soldier who has seen some service and gone into action not knowing whether he was coming out or not and he will tell you without any hesitating in his voice that there is a Supreme Being that must rule the destinies of the world.

The time was slipping along and it was now beginning to get dark, so I started to think out which would be the best way to go around the machine gun. I voted my preference in opinion to MacCauley and Hutson and they thought that it was the best way so after waiting for a few minutes, until the darkness had some what closed down, we started.

PRINTING IS AN ART

The thralldom of the Dark Ages was broken by the introduction of the Art of Printing. All modern progress is based on knowledge. With the spreading of knowledge the fields of invention, industry and commerce were widened and made more prolific.

The Art of Printing had developed enormously. It has reached a stage of perfection undreamed of by Gutenberg and his early disciples. With the aid of the most highly perfected machinery it is now possible to produce perfect copies a thousand fold more rapidly than the earlier crude productions.

For obvious reasons, the country printer has been slower to modernize his equipment than the printer in the city. Thus the term "Country Printer" has carried with it a stigma of poor or inferior produce.

On the other hand city printers are establishing their operating plants in the country, for they are finding it more economic; and at the same time more congenial for the operatives.

The Chauvin Chronicle is steadily developing along its own line. It has a modern plant, situate away from the city. It is producing city standard work, and is making every effort to demonstrate that the term "country printer" may stand for what it really means: that is "a master of his own art, and a servant of all other activities".

Learig Talent At Learig

As a class, farmers are apt to be financially careless, largely because there has heretofore been no complete method—so simple the ordinary man could follow it—provided for keeping accurate track of their operations.

Scott's Simplified Accounting System for Farmers meets this need—it forms provide for a monthly showing in every branch of farm work for five years—include a detailed inventory which will be accepted by any bank.

Following it's simple principles, any farmer can keep accurate accounts—have a perfect check on every detail of farm work—it is a perfect book-keeping system—compiled by a banking expert especially for farmers.

The only system with which is given a Systematized Pocket Note Book which simplifies your Income Tax Return.

Hay Permits Now Will Cost More

According to an order in council dated February 11th, and which has been received by Alex Norquay, head of the local dominion land office, dues on hay permits for either dominion or school lands have been raised to 25c. per ton to actual settlers for their own use, while to other than actual settlers for sale or other disposition to $1.00 per ton.

Leases to cut hay on Dominion lands, which cover a period of five years, may be obtained at a rental of 10c. per acre, per year. This also applies to school lands.

Heretofore the rates for settlers hay permits were 10c. per ton, and to other than settlers, for sale or other disposition; 50c. per ton, while the rental for leasing of hay lands was at the rate of 25c. per acre.

This leasing privilege should not be confused with the leasing of lands for grazing purposes, which remains as heretofore.

This change in the regulations will affect all parties applying for hay permits during the coming season.

Good Investment

Travel Will Prove

In every person's life at some time or other there comes a feeling of utter exhaustion, or as some say "Fed Up" with a general lack of interest in their everyday surroundings. Hard work is as a rule blamed for their condition, and little is done to remedy it until too late and the family physician is called. Work may be to a certain extent responsible for this condition, but the chief reason is the lack of a change, a relaxation of the mind. Get away for a few weeks vacation, see new sights and how the rest of the world live. Enjoy a change of climate.

ate. There are thousands of interesting places in Canada which may be enjoyed either winter or summer, and within easy reach via the Canadian Pacific Railway.

A trip at any season of the year send you back with renewed vigor, broader views and much wiser from the knowledge gained. A postal card to any Canadian Pacific Agent will bring you literature and information desired.

AIRLIE U.F.A.

The Airlie U.F.A. will hold their Annual Dance on March the 11th. Keep this date in mind.

The Fluctuating Dollar

At present, a dollar is worth only about 50c to spend; but it is worth $1 to save. Because, dollars deposited in a Savings Account will steadily increase in buying power as the world gets on its feet again and the supply of commodities grows equal to the demand. Buy only what you cannot do without. Put your dollars away in a Savings Account until their buying power becomes more equalized.
